

Notes on Contributors

Sean Armil graduated from the University of Florida in May 2009. He is currently a philosophy graduate student at the University of Arizona. sarmil@email.arizona.edu

Randolph Feezell is a Professor in the Department of Philosophy at Creighton University, Omaha, Nebraska. His current research interests include topics in philosophy of religion, philosophy of sport, and ethics. His most recent book, Sport, Play, and Ethical Reflection, was published by University of Illinois Press, 2004, and recent papers have examined the ethics of swearing and the question of the meaning of life. RandolphFeezell@creighton.edu

Ronald L. Hall is Professor of Philosophy and Chair of the Department of Philosophy at Stetson University. He holds the B.A. from Stetson, the Masters of Divinity from Duke, and the Ph.D. in Philosophy from Chapel Hill. He is the author of three books: Word and Spirit: A Kierkegaardian Critique of the Modern Age, The Human Embrace: The Love of Philosophy and the Philosophy of Love: Kierkegaard, Cavell, Nussbaum, and Logic: A Brief Introduction. He has published numerous articles in journals and books, and is a frequent speaker at professional meetings. He is currently Vice President of the Society for the Philosophy of Religion. ronhall@stetson.edu

Xiaoqiang Han received his Ph.D. from Queen's University and teaches at the Department of Philosophy, University of Toronto. hanxiaoqiang@gmail.com

Jae Jerkins is a doctoral student in the Department of Religion at the Florida State University, having received his M.A. in Interdisciplinary Humanities from the Florida State University in 2009. His research interests include hermeneutics, philosophy of religion, and cultural theory. His recent conference presentations include talks on the Kantian notion of the sublime (St. Petersburg College, 2008), ideology and mysticism (FSU, 2008), and simulacra and consumption (FSU, 2009). Additionally, he will be a presenter at the annual conference of the Modern Language Association in Montréal this spring (McGill University, 2010). Currently, he is pursuing a Ph.D. in Religion with a research emphasis on religion and early modern thought. jjerkins@fsu.edu

Scott Kimbrough is an Associate Professor of Philosophy and Chair of the Humanities Division at Jacksonville University in Jacksonville, Florida. His main research interests include moral psychology, philosophy of emotion, early modern philosophy, and philosophy of language. These interests are united thematically by a concern to understand our rationality even as the psychological processes underlying it fail to measure up to philosophical preconceptions of what rationality requires. skimbro@ju.edu

David McNaughton is Professor of Philosophy at the Florida State University, and Emeritus Professor of Philosophy at Keele University, England. He is the author of Moral Vision and of a modest but select number of papers on ethics and on the philosophy of religion. He is the founder of the British Society for Ethical Theory. dmcnaughton@fsu.edu

Stephen G. Morris is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at The College of Staten Island/CUNY. His research interests include ethical theory, the philosophy of biology, free will, and moral psychology. He has authored or co-authored several published articles, including “Tracing the Origins of Altruism: The Evolutionary Needle in a Haystack,” and “Is Incompatibilism Intuitive?” In 2008 he received a Distinguished Professor Award with distinction in the area of Scholarship/Creative Activity from Missouri Western State University. He received Missouri Western State University’s James V. Mehl Outstanding Faculty Scholarship Award in 2009. stephen.morris@csi.cuny.edu

Ryan Showler received his Ph.D. in philosophy from Loyola University Chicago. His dissertation defended Kant’s moral theory against the standard charge of empty formalism on the basis of Kant’s use of the distinction between archetypal and ectypal ideals throughout his practical philosophy, a distinction that has been largely ignored by Kant scholars. He teaches philosophy at Yavapai College in Prescott, AZ, and his research interests include Kant, ethical theory, social/political philosophy, and Buddhist philosophy. ryan.showler@yc.edu

John Valentine has previously published in FPR. He received his Ph.D. in philosophy from Vanderbilt University in 1974. He has taught at Mercer University, the University of Alabama in Birmingham, East Georgia College, and the Savannah College of Art and Design. He has had articles published in the Southwest Philosophy Review. In addition, his book, Beginning Aesthetics: An Introduction to the Philosophy of Art, was published by McGraw-Hill in 2007. He also writes poetry and has been published in the Sewanee Review, the Midwest Quarterly, the Adirondack Review, Southern Poetry Review, and various other journals. His chapbooks, Combing the Hair of the Dying, Close to the Fallen, and The Trembling in Us All have been published by Pudding House Publications in Columbus, Ohio. jmvalent1948@bellsouth.net